The policy of being too cautious is the greatest risk of all
- Jawaharlal Nehru

CREATIVE CORNER

Measured Ground

Voices rise and softly press, asking more, but meaning less, answers fall in chosen parts, never whole, but shaped like starts.

*What is given shifts its frame, never leaves the way it came,
so the hand learns what to spare, what to place and what to bear.*

Even what is held inside does not always stay allied, time can thin what's left unshown, make the certain feel unknown.

So one stands in in-between, neither fully heard nor seen, waiting ground that will remain—unchanged by touch, untouched by gain.
